Laurel Berry Oil

Laurel berries are handpicked once a year in October by villagers from rural areas in Hatay (Antochia) region. Laurel trees naturally grow in the areas where modern plantation is not established.

Handpicked Laurel berries are boiled with water in big kettles to help peel extracted from the seed. The oil is accumulated on top of the kettle after 20 hours continuous boiling.

This dark green supernatural oil is collected by hand from top of kettle and stored in oilcan.

Centuries of experience is still being transferred to new generations. Currently, this old tradition of producing oil is an existing way of extracting Laurel berry oil.

The Traditional Laurel Berry Oil used in our precious soap is 100% pure and does not contain any artificial additive.

We make our soaps with best percentage of Laurel seed oil (%33) and virgin olive oil (%67)

DAPHNE LEGEND

Apollo, son of Zeus, sees a beautiful young girl on the edge of the river. Name of this unique beauty was Daphne. The lord of light wants to talk to her, however Daphne, understands what's in the Lord of Light. Starts to escape. She escapes, Apollo chases, on the one hand graceless "escape I love you," he shouts. The lord of light, wants to grasp this beautiful fairy. Distance shortens gradually between Apollo and Daphne, Apollo's furious breath of her hair to hear. She understands that there is no longer escape, she suddenly stops and begs: "Oh mother earth, hide me, protect me."

Peels cover her chest, hair turning into leaves, arms into branches, is evolved into a Daphne tree. Daphne tree is illustrated by the occurrence of miracle and melancholy. Apollo surrounded deeply sad: – "daphne, then you will be Apollo's holly tree, heroes, will decorate their foreheads with your green and never falls leaves. " Upon kind and conciliatory word of Apollon, Daphne curves branches and greets Lord of Light. Here are today's Harbiye occurrence of this story.
