Because Im The Child Here And I Said So: A Joke Book For Parents (Because You Need A Laugh!) Read Online

Title: Because I Said So An uptight, conservative businesswoman accompanies her boyfriend to his eccentric and outgoing family's annual Christmas celebration and finds that she's a fish out of water in their free-spirited way of life. Anna wants to be like other girls her age 18 : date a guy etc. In Prague he breaks his promise of only 2 agents following her to a concert and she runs away with Ben to see Europe. A teenager Moore , disillusioned by too many examples of love gone wrong, refuses to believe that true love exists.

Then this new guy Ford comes along A reverend puts an engaged couple through a grueling marriage preparation course to see if they are meant to be married in his church. A happy newlywed marriage counselor's views on wedded bliss get thrown for a loop when she finds out her parents are getting divorced.

After her sister and brother-in-law die in a car accident, a young woman becomes the guardian of their three children. The daughter of the U. President heads off to college where she falls for a graduate student with a secret. Mary Fiore is San Francisco's most successful supplier of romance and glamor. She knows all the tricks. She knows all the rules. But then she breaks the most important rule of all: she falls in love with the groom. Three female employees of the Federal Reserve plot to steal money that is about to be destroyed.

Single-girl anxiety causes Kat Ellis to hire a male escort to pose as her boyfriend at her sister's wedding. A swinger on the cusp of being a senior citizen with a taste for young women falls in love with an accomplished woman closer to his age. Daphne Wilder is a mother whose love knows no bounds or boundaries. She is the proud mom of three daughters: stable psychologist Maggie, sexy and irreverent Mae and insecure, adorable Milly - who, when it comes to men, is like psychotic flypaper.

In order to prevent her youngest from making the same mistakes she did, Daphne decides to set Milly up with the perfect man. Little does Milly know, however, that her mom placed an ad in the on-line personals to find him.

Comic mayhem unfolds as Daphne continues to do the wrong thing for the right reasons In a battle of strong wills, the mother-daughter dynamic is tested in all its fierce, wacky complexity. The girls help Daphne finally discover the truths and impossibilities of motherly love, all while trying to answer the questions: where does it begin and where should it end?

Written by anonymous. Hyperactively controlling Daphne Diane Keaton decides to fix her youngest daughter Milly Mandy Moore by finding her the perfect man via an on-line dating service ad that Milly knows nothing about. Enter stage right Jason Tom Everett Scott as the dashing, rich architect that Mom feels will surely love and provide for Milly, but is really awfully cold and totally not her style.

There is not much new and surprising here, and it is pretty obvious how it is all going to work out from the beginning. But there are some fun moments and some touching moments that do make the movie worthwhile. Some of Daphne's "mother moments" will be familiar to all of us. I would have moved to Alaska long ago if my mother rearranged my knick-knacks and furniture every time she came over.

But how controlling Daphne can be is not really the point of the movie. To me, this film was ultimately more about what it means to really love another person.

Daphne calls her love for her daughters "impossible love" because it is so hard to let go and watch them head for the edge of a proverbial cliff and not to stop them. But a love that does not respect the uniqueness of its object is missing out on something. As Daphne continues to push horribly inappropriate Jason at Milly, she seems to be ignoring her daughter's spirit. You have to wonder if she really knows her at all.

It can serve as a good lesson to mothers everywhere. Allowing them to stumble and find their own way is gut-wrenching, but as long as it is not really a life-and-death situation it may be best to let them fall and pick themselves back up again. It's as true of learning to ride a bike as of learning to navigate interpersonal relationships. Falling down is pretty much inevitable, but those who love you will be there to support you and help put you back on your feet.

By loving them honestly for their strengths and foibles we can be that port in the storm without also being one more roadblock and annoyance that needs to be overcome. And what about those times when you can't be there at all? I'm just at the beginning of that journey with my own children. Personally, when life has knocked me down one way or another, I've consistently turned to an even bigger and more powerful parent than my mom or dad.

As my own daughters strike out on their own more and more, I know that I will be putting them in the care of our mutual Parent one step at a time and teaching them this same lesson. I'll do my best to love, respect, and support them, but God will always follow through with the best care and direction for us all. And Daphne does finally reach a greater understanding of respect and genuine, not spirit-choking, love for Milly.

It's not divine, but any means, but it's better. Getting a life of her own probably helps. In the end, everyone is happy and in love, just as you knew they would be 90 minutes earlier.

The word "hilarious" was repeated often by my fellow movie-goers as we left the theater. That may be a bit of an overstatement. I definitely had some good laughs, but Daphne ends up wearing one too many cakes. It was often a bit slapstick for my taste, though the audience loved it.

Taking into account that this movie well earns its PG rating for sexual situations, conversations, and innuendo, it rates high on the chick-flick meter for a good night out with the girls.

With all the pressure on the modern parent, a little comic relief is not just welcome; it's a matter of survival. Between the fat stacks of parenting books designed to engender paranoia and hyper-competitiveness, and the culture that demands everyone must "have it all," today's parents don't stand a chance. Because I'm the Child Here and I Said So by cartoonist Pat Byrnes is a gleeful send-up of modern parenting: the obsession, the sport, the pseudo science, and all the maddening challenges parenting presents.

Each full-color cartoon features a smart punch line that will make you smile or wince in recognition. Be advised, if you find yourself relating to any of the parents in this book, you need to chill out. Whether you keep it for your own sanity or give it to a desperate parent, the cartoons of Pat Byrnes will delight and amuse. Home 1 Books 2. Read an excerpt of this book! Add to Wishlist.
